

Second Step Foundation Donates $260,000 to Help Fight Hunger in the Midwest and Rocky Mountain Regions

MINNEAPOLIS, Minnesota, February 2, 2021 | Second Step Foundation believes that no one in America should be hungry.

Second Step Foundation donated $260,000 to local food banks across 26 markets in the Midwest and Rocky Mountain Regions. This funding will continue to help these food banks purchase food and other necessities. Second Step Foundation is committed to help feed people in the communities where Interstate employees live and work.

As I said to the organizations I have visited thus far, this donation is hopefully just the start of us doing many good things together in the communities we mutually serve," said Jim Williams, Second Step Foundation Co-Executive Director and President of I-State Truck Center. "We can truly make a difference in people's lives, and I look forward to watching the many ways in which our employees in each of these communities will rise to the occasion."

About Second Step Foundation

The Second Step Foundation was formed in 2014 by the family of Interstate CEO Travis Penrod as a registered not-for-profit that has supported deserving charities with financial grants each year.

In early 2020, the foundation board established new direction for the organization to tie it more closely to Interstate Companies, Inc. and the 26 communities in which it serves across 12 states.

The foundation, believing that no one in America should be hungry, has intensified its focus on fighting hunger by supporting local food shelves and similar charities that help feed people.

The foundation's new logo carries a tagline, "Fueled by Interstate Companies," which signifies that the ongoing success of Interstate Companies will help sustain the foundation. Employees in the local branches of each division nominate charities in their communities to be considered for a donation.
